

Pavle Nedić, MA

Research Assistant, Institute of International Politics and Economics, Centre for Eurasian Studies

Pavle Nedić is a Research Assistant at the Institute of International Politics and Economics, Centre for Eurasian Studies. The areas of his academic interest are foreign policy analysis, international relations theories, particularly theory of realism, international security and great power relations. Pavle is currently a PhD student of International and European Studies at the Faculty of Political Science, University of Belgrade. He is an OSCE Mission to Serbia scholarship for PhD studies holder. His doctoral thesis will focus on factors shaping the US foreign policy towards Russia in the post-Cold War period. At the same faculty, Pavle finished his undergraduate studies in international relations and master studies in international security. The subject of his master thesis was Balancing of the American power after the Ukrainian crisis: case study relationship between Russian Federation and the People's Republic of China. Pavle has authored several articles published in scientific journals on the topics of American grand strategy, Hedging strategy in South-East Asia, the US-Russian relations and Serbian and French political systems. Pavle has participated in numerous seminars, summer schools and scientific conferences, including ISA-IDSS 2022.

pavle.nedic@diplomacy.bg.ac.rs

<https://scholar.google.com/citations?user=HdUovYAAAAJ&hl=sr>